A Reduction of ten per cent, will be allowed to purchasers of Ten or more copies. This Standard Work on the Chinese Language, constructed on the basis of Kanghi's Imperial Dictionary, contains all Chinese characters in practical use, and while alpha-botically arranged according to the sounds of the oldest dialect of China, the Cantonese, it gives also the Mandarin pronuuciation of all characters explained in the book, so that its usefulness is by no means confined to the Cantonese Dialect, but the work is a practically complete Thesaurus of the whole Written Language of China, ancient and modern, as used all over the Empire, whilst its introductory chapters serve the purposes of a philological guide to the student.

A Supplement, arranged for being bound and used by itself, and containing a List of the Radicals, an Index, and a List of Surnames, will be published and sold separately.

SEA ANEMONES. Most persons have noticed small circular markings, say an inch and a half in diameter. on the sand left partially dry by the retreating tide, near the St. Kilda baths, and elsewhere along the coast line where the beach is of a similar character. Their general appearance is that of a slight depression, filled with a piece of semi-dry seaweed. In the centre, however, there are commonly seen a few fragments of shell, small pebbles, or larger than ordinary grains of sand. As the tide flows, these formerly obscure markings change their aspect altogether. The semi-dried seaweed becomes of a lively green and spreads out into a circular shape. Uloser observation will discover that there are a number of small branches radiating from a centre. This centre, however, generally nearly bare, and is of a cream or white colour. In the very centre itself is what appears to be a small opening, al though it is really closed up with tolerable firmness. Still further examination will show that the whole resembles a beautifully green flower, the radiating branches representing the petals. If touched, or if the lone sprig. When she gets on the sprig sand near is stamped upon, the branches are seen to contract. If, when one of these so-called flowers is fully expanded, the finger is so placed in the centre that the branches, or tentacies, as they are termed, are free to close thereon, a peculiar sensation will be felt. Some naturalists say that the sensation experienced is similar to that felt when the finger is introduced into the mouth of a ring snake. Snakes, however, being our special abhoronce, we have never yet tried the experiment, so do not care to youch for the truth of the assertion. If the sand round one of these flowers is removed, the whole will be like body extending for some distance downward, and adhering to the rock, a stone, or a shell at the lower end. By exercising a considerable amount of care. and pressing an ivory paper knife between the rock and the bottom of this strange creature, it may be removed, and should then be transferred to a jar of salt water for further observation. In its new position the animal, for so it is, soon learns to adhere to the bottom or sides of the glass. and also to crawl slowly about, by alternate expansions and contractions of the foot, or dislike end, by means of which adhesion to the glass has been effected. In its new home, too, the creature soon expands its tentacles as before. If a small crustacean, or a piece of meat, is dropped on the central portion, the tentacles close around it. The central and formerly closed-up orifice is seen to open. The crustacean or other food is swallowed, and after remaining in the animal's stomach for a longer or shorter period, the outer shell or indigestible portions are expelled. These are the well known sea anemones now so commonly met with in drawingroom aquaria. The species found at St. Kilds have their tentacles of an unvarying green tint, and bury themselves deeply in the sand. A surrounding of sand, in fact, seems so essentially necessary to their existence that if placed within an aquarium without sand to burrow in, they generally grow sickly, transform themselves into an hourglass shape, and speedily dio. All species of anemone, however, are not prone to thus burying themselves. An anemone. numerous near the Red Bluff, is generally seen altogether unprotected, and is of a dullish crimson colour. Even this kind, however, is often found enveloped in sand, especially in depressions of the rock into which sand is washed by the waves. Rocks, however, are not the only places whereat anemones are to be met with. Some minute but beautifully-striped specimens are often seen attached to the large | w dew (wet). stalks of seaweed, to shells, and even, we are informed, to the bodies of sharks and whales. One species has a habit of ad. hering to certain burrowing bivalves. Some particular kind of testaces are met with destitute of a parasitic anemone. This fact. however, is not verified, but rather the reverse, as the bivalve in question often reposes in the sand entirely alone. The idea has arisen from the circumstance that whenever the tentacles of the anemone are found spread out upon the surface, a bivalve may be always looked for beneath. There would, indeed, seem to be no instinct of fellowship whatever concerned in the matter. The anemone must have something solid to rest upon, and as there are generally no stones in the neighbourhood. the shells of the mollusc are appropriated for the purpose required. Mr Kingsley. however, mentions a tather remarkable fact concerning these singular creatures. the veritable flowers of the ocean. A particular species always attaches itself to a shell. But our particular gasteropod is a rapid burrower, and its shell is avoided, as the reverend naturalist ang-Rests, because the instinct of the parasitio animal teaches that it will be seriously incommoded by the habits of such a com. The fact is that did an DAROMETER- DA.M. ... 30.011 anemone, attach itself to the shell of a molluse, the very first bu row of the host would inevitably prove fatal to the guest. OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

found connected with a cylindrical, ffeshy-

"All our learned societies should subscribe to this scholarly and enterprising Review."-Northern Christian Advocate (U.S.) "The China Review * * * * has an excollent table of contents."—Celestial Empire. "The Publication always contains subjects of interest to sojourners in the Far East and the present issue will hold favourable if not advantageous comparison, with preceding numbers."—Celestial Empire. "This number contains several articles of interest and value."-North-China Herald.

"The China Review for September-October fully maintains the high standard of excellence which characterises that publication, and altogother forms a very interesting and readable number. Meteorologists will find an interesting and valuable contribution by Dr. Fritsche, on "the Amount of Precipitation (Rain and Snow) of Peking," showing the results of observations made at the Imperial Russian Observatory at Paking, from 1841 to "Notes on the Dutch Occupation of Formosa," by Mr. Geo. Phillips, contains some interesting information, although much of it is second-hand. The Notices of New Books include a most-generous and appreciative review of "The Divine Classic of Nan-Hua," and the Notes and Queries are as usual very interesting."-North-China Daily News.

"A substantial and reliable Review which all students of China and the Chineso would do well to patronise."-Chrysanthemum. "The November-December number of the China Review contains less variety than usual, but the few articles are very interest ting. The opening paper by Mr Herbers A. Giles on "The New Testament in Chinese" treats of a question that must necessarily be of great importance in the eyeof all missionaries. . . Mr E. H. Parker's "Short Journeys in Szechuen" are continued, and a goodly instalment of these travels in the interior of China is given. Mr F. H. Balfour contributes a paper of some length entitled "The Emperor Cheng, founder of the Chinese Empire," which will be read with genuine interest by students of Chinese history. Victoria will be delivered the same day, A few short notices of New Books and a and generally within two hours, unless the number of Notes and Queries, one of which | delivery should be retarded by the Contract "On Chinese Oaths in Western Borneo Mails. and Java" might appropriately have been placed under a separate heading, complete Trubner's Oriental Record contains the following notice of the China Review:-The present publication, judging by the number now before us, is intended to occupy a position, as regards China and the neighbouring countries, some what similar to that which has been filled in India by the Calcutta Review. Beside notices of new books relating to China and the East, which will be a useful feature of the Review, if carried out with punctuality and detail, we are glad to notice that "Notes" and "Queries" are destined to find a place in its pages also. It is to be hoped that this opening for contributions on Chinese subjects may evoke a similar degree of literary zeal to that which was displayed during the lifetime of its predecessor in the field, and that the China Review may receive the support necessary to lusure its continuance.
